INTERIM SUPERINTENDENT,
NATIONAL PARK SERVICE FORT MONROË

“I look to my parents, grandmothers and especially my great-great-grandfather George Washington Mohr for inspiration, born enslaved in Mississippi he would have been age 8 at the end of the American Civil War; I admire his desire to return to Africa and to support black economic independence. This rich family history brings relevance to a history we read about in books yet comes to life in the landscapes and narratives of our communities, families, and ancestors. My purpose is to create the opportunities to tell these stories through my academic and professional work.”
